

Danube Day 2014 in Montenegro

Practical action for the Danube rivers

Danube Day in Montenegro spread the message that everyone can do something to help protect their rivers.

2014 marked 10 years since the first Danube Day in 2004 and 20 years since the signing of the 1994 Danube River Protection Convention, which sparked the international cooperation we see today.

June 29th was celebrated with a river and bank clean-up day in Bijelo Polje, northern Montenegro. Residents young and old, fishermen, environmentalists and kayakers from Bijelo Polje joined with Serbian kayakers from the downstream town of Prijepolje to get active for their river. A substantial stretch of the River Lim was cleared thanks to their hard work.

Danube Day Partners

Local communities, NGOs and fishing organisations in northern Montenegro and kayak clubs from Bijelo Polje and Prijepolje.

Danube Day 2014: Get active for a living Danube!

For general information about the 14-country Danube Day celebrations, view www.danubeday.org or email the International Commission for the Protection of the Danube River (ICPDR): benedikt.mandl@unvienna.org.